

Publication: Palm Beach Daily News; Date: Jan 12, 2016; Section: Main; Page: A1

DIGGING DEEP

About 300 students from four area schools attended the Literacy Days at the Ann Norton Sculpture Gardens to learn new and creative approaches to reading while exploring the 1.7-acre gardens on Monday. Sponsored by Palm Beacher Cynthia Sulzberger, this educational program was presented by nationally recognized authors, illustrators, local law enforcement, librarians and artists.

Above: From left, Justin Lapointe, Mackenzie Newton and Madison Villaman, second-graders at Benoist Farms Elementary School, meditate on what their dream world would be like. Spoken-word artist Abasi Hanif led the meditation.

Right: Amari Thomkins, a second-grader at Benoist Farms, inspects a worm during a program presented by environmentalist Aileen Waech.

Photos by Melanie Bell / Daily News